2003 MTMC Training Symposium:

MTMC's annual training symposium highlights distribution challenges

With a focus on partnerships, transformation and technology, the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) will convene its biggest training symposium ever, in Denver, March 17-20, 2003.

This year's theme, Meeting Distribution Challenges, centers on where the command is headed, process and program improvements, and the technology that will link all the critical players, as the federal government continues to transform, said Symposium Program Manager, Jeanie Bell Winslow.

The agenda includes two panel discussions on Distribution and Transformation, and Technology Initiatives. Attendees will have a choice of 18 functional breakout sessions on transportation-related subjects. They include freight, household goods, passenger traffic, entitlements and strategic distribution management.

"This year we are expecting big numbers in attendance" said Winslow. The Navy is participating fully, and for the first time, the General Services Administration will play a role in the agenda, along with other agencies.
